

Learn to Become an ACLS Instructor

The American Heart Association is the leading education source for Emergency Cardiovascular Care including lay rescuer and Healthcare Providers. This course will cover topics including teaching the adult learner, testing and evaluating skills, and developing a positive classroom environment.

The AHA has developed a new Instructor course that allows candidates to complete online tutorials and attend a 12 hour, one-day specific orientation to Advanced Cardiac Life Support education. All participants will also be required to teach one ACLS class while being monitored for successful course completion.

Complete the registration form below and submit it with a copy of your current AHA ACLS provider card to Alma. The online portion must be completed, along with method of payment, prior to attending the orientation course. All participants will meet on June 26, 2017, from 8am-12pm, 1-5pm, 6-10pm for the ACLS Instructor orientation course.
